Proper Use of Score Report

Proper use of the score report means there is adequate evidence to support the intended use of the score report and to support the decisions and outcomes rendered based on those scores. While not inclusive of all possible examples of misuse, two specific examples of misuse are:

- Employment Selection or Hiring. The Washington State Professional Educator Standards Board (PESB) and ETS believe it is inappropriate for a state, district, school or other local education agency to differentiate among candidates who have met or exceeded the passing score on a ProTeach Portfolio or related assessment for purposes of making a selection or hiring decision. ProTeach Portfolio was designed for use in credentialing — not for rank-ordering candidates or for making decisions that presume a predictive relationship between performance on the ProTeach Portfolio and performance on the job.
- Employment-Based Decisions Affecting Fully Licensed and Employed Educators. PESB defines a fully licensed educator as one who has met all state licensure requirements and, therefore, is not practicing under a probationary, emergency or provisional license. PESB and ETS believe it is inappropriate for school districts or other local education agencies to use ProTeach Portfolio and related assessment scores for determining salaries, promoting or demoting educators or completing performance appraisals/evaluations.
